Militarists Rally In Last Stand Against Attackers

Debating Union's Second Mock Parliament Takes Place Tomorrow Night in Union Ballroom — Prime Minister Schafhausen Introduces Bill Against Pacifism — Opposition Leader Pick Fears C.O.T.C. — Minister Owen Lays Charges Against Opponents

McGILL militarists, staggering beneath the blow delivered by the results of the War Questionnaire, will make a determined attempt at a comeback at the second of the Debating Union's Mock Parliaments tomorrow evening at 8:15 in the Union Ballroom. The Right Honourable Henry Schafhausen, Prime Minister, will introduce a bill to the effect that "Pacifism is an impossible creed for Canadians." Alfred Pick leads His Majesty's Most Loyal Opposition.

There will be no official cabinet, and anyone wishing to speak will be given an opportunity. All speeches, except those of the two principal participants, will be limited to seven minutes. Ken Baker, President of the Debating Union, acts as Speaker of the House. It has been announced that the following will also appear: Gordon George as Minister against impossible Pacifist Creeds, Leon Smart, Minister of Ancient Beliefs; George Owen, Minister to France; and Bud Drury, Minister without portfolio.

Prime Minister Resists
Seething with excitement, the Prime Minister stayed in bed last night to recover from the effects of a hectic campaign. His more hardy opponent, the leader of the Opposition, was able to speak for publication. He anticipated an easy victory, but expected opposition from the C.O.T.C. If they returned from the New York Horse Show in time. When informed of the Premier's condition, he concluded with the statement that it was time that Generals died in bed.

The other members of the Government were not feeling in quite such a gay mood after a hectic session on the Arts Building stairs yesterday. George Owen, however, revealed that the C.O.T.C. were being rerouted through France to escape a railroad strike which the opposition had arranged. "Such dastardly, underhanded, slimy methods must not be allowed to prevail in such a fair, beautiful country like Canada," he thundered.

In the face of an hostile crowd (of Daily reporters) the Honourable Bud Drury complained of the power of the press as he reproached the McGill Daily for purposely befuddling the electorate as to the date of Thursday's Mock Parliament, originally scheduled for Wednesday, which he feared would conflict with Parliaments scheduled by the Daily for Monday or Friday.

Politicians Please Populace Panning Pimpled Pacifists

Pseudo Statesmen Seek Student Support at Hustings

"WHERE are the snows of yesterday?" complained the electorate as it was unable to hail the political orators in the manner now traditional, at yesterday's hustings at one o'clock on the steps of the Arts Building.

Nevertheless, rising amid an exploding chorus of fireworks, his voice scarcely to be heard mid the deafening din the Right Honourable Henry Schafhausen implored the populace to support the Government against the "Putrid Pacifism" advocated by the Opposition. "I implore you for the sake of your children," he concluded, "your many children."

"The Government," bellowed the Honourable Alfred Pick, Leader of the Opposition, "is keeping us in the dark. Their proposal is Naziating. They advocate one more dinghy for the Canadian navy."

"Pick pampers these pimply pacifists," claimed the Hon. George Owen, Minister of Eugenics, rising hence into flights of rhetoric. "Canadian womanhood for Canadians" was his central theme. "The Opposition is made up of puny men," denounced the Honourable Bud Drury, minister of the Navy, "they advocate nothing." "Let us stand up," he cried, but his concluding words were drowned in the refrain of song started by the hecklers.

Rising to attack the Government The Honourable Don Black bewailed the lamentable personal habits of the Prime Minister. "He carries the flower of our Canadian youth into Europe," thundered Black. "He and the notorious Dinglehofer and his dog Adolf — allowing Canadian youth to get into the insidious clutches of German."

Support Of Would Be Authors Asked

CONTRIBUTIONS for the Arts Undergraduate Magazine have been coming in but slowly and a call has gone out from the Editorial Board urging all students of the Arts Faculty who are so inclined to contribute anything of a literary nature, short stories and poems being particularly desirable. The deadline for such contributions has been set at the beginning of the Christmas holidays.

The magazine, official organ of the Arts and Science Undergraduates, made its first appearance last year and while that issue was considered a success it is hoped to make some improvements this year. A new name will be adopted but until this is done the title "Arts Undergraduate Magazine" will be retained. All contributions may be left with Bill Gentleman or with a member of the Editorial Board: Editor-in-Chief — John Winston Kerr; Associate Editors — Arthur Bloomfield and Gordon Bourne; Business Manager — Gordon Wilson.

Cercle Francaise Meets

The first meeting of the Cercle Francaise will be held today at eight o'clock in the Union Grill Room, when Dr. Lemaitre of the department of Romance Languages will speak on "India." All men students are invited to attend. A charge of fifteen cents will be made to cover the cost of refreshments.

Librarian Outlines Osler's Collection To Literary Society

Donation Forms Basis For Important Library

CONTAINS CATALOGUE

"Sir William Osler as a Man of Letters," Topic

"Equanimitas," the motto adopted by Sir William Osler on his coat of arms, formed the keynote of his life, according to Dr. W. W. Francis, librarian of the Osler Library at McGill, in an address to the St. James Literary Society last night. Dr. Francis, especially qualified to speak as he said, upon the topic "Sir William Osler as a Man of Letters" because of the relationship he bore to him as godson and one who was greatly influenced by him.

In the course of his lecture, the speaker made mention of the good work done by Sir William in the literary and scientific field, for which he was created baronet in 1911. In the words of the speaker, "Few doctors have risen above mediocrity in the literary field, but Sir William was one of the few." He also was accorded the dignity of being made a member of The Literary Society, of which Johnson was one of the founders.

Bequeathed To College
The Osler Library, which comprises a history of medicine and science, was especially bequeathed to his Alma Mater by Sir William with a view to its educational value. As the speaker remarked, Osler always remembered his early associations at McGill, and the belief his associates had in his ability.

The books of the library, which were collected by him, are many of them old and prized volumes as well as modern historical works. The collection is much enhanced, Dr. Francis said, by the collector's own catalogue, which was indexed and completed in 1929. One of the greatest features of the library is its Incubula, a valuable collection of 136 books of the 15th century. All the editions in the library are segregated into eight distinct sections, the first of which comprises a bibliographical review of the evolution of science.

Views Of Life
In explaining the views of life held by Sir William, the lecturer remarked that he was often wont to pronounce diatribes against the narrow chauvinism and petty nationalism which was prevalent in his time. Osler was also an ardent religious man, although a scientist, and a firm believer in the immortality of man.

His interest in books was varied, but as Dr. Francis pointed out, his tastes were sound and standard, showing a leaning towards Shakespeare and the Book of Books. Elucidating his reasons for dedicating the Osler Library to McGill, Sir William himself once jestingly remarked that there was "No better float through posterity, than being the author of a good bibliography."

English Society To Hear Of Authoress

The life and works of an unusual English woman will be explained at the next meeting of the English Literature Society which will be held in Room 13 of the Arts Building at 4 o'clock on Friday afternoon. The meeting is to be addressed by Professor A. S. Noad, and the subject of his address will be "Gertrude Bell," whom he first met in Baghdad in 1922.

Gertrude Bell, who was the most remarkable English woman of her time was not only an authoress but also a rival for laurels of the famous Colonel Lawrence. She travelled extensively in the East and the majority of her books are on travel topics. In 1894 she wrote "Sagan Maneh," a book of poems; her other works include "Amurath to Amurath" and "Palace and Mosque at Ukhaidar." Gertrude Bell was also known as an aid to the British during the Great War.

Philosophers Will Analyse Education From Five Angles

"EDUCATION"—analyzed from five different points of view—will be the subject of tonight's meeting of the Philosophical Society at Strathcona Hall, commencing at eight o'clock. The discussion takes the form of a symposium.

Juanita DeShield will discuss the religious angle; Dr. Files will speak on the humanistic side; Mary Aikman will present the moral point of view, Saul Albert the biological, while Dr. Hendel will treat the subject from a sociological standpoint. Professor F. Clarke of the Department of Education has signified his intention of being present and taking part in the discussion.

These various viewpoints were treated at the last meeting in a discussion of G. Lowes Dickenson's "Modern Symposium," and it was agreed that they might well be applied to the topic of education. Educational discussions have been a feature of the Philosophical Society meetings for many years past, and have always proved popular. Refreshments will be served at the conclusion of the program.

Governor General Deemed Necessary

Resolution to Abolish Royal Representative is Defeated

MACINTYRE CHOSEN

Will Compete in Oratorical Contest For Lachlan Gibb

The retention of the office of Governor-General was upheld last night in a debate at the Diocesan College, when R. T. Mercer and K.M.C. MacIntyre supported the resolution "That the office of Governor-General of Canada should be abolished."

"Since the office of Governor-General is unnecessary and is not essential to the preservation of Canada's relations with Great Britain," said Kerr, the first speaker for the affirmative, who also emphasized the degeneracy of this office into a mere social form, and complained of the fact that Canada is obliged to spend $100,000 for the maintenance of an official whose sole duty seems to be in the unveiling of memorials and in other similar activities.

Office Essential
R. T. Mercer stated that "So long as Canada remains British, and stands for British ideals, the office is very essential." He went on to show that since King George, who is really just as much King of Canada as of Great Britain, and since he obviously cannot personally take part in the government of every part of the Empire, it is only natural that he should appoint a representative in the person of the Governor-General. Moreover, since he does not owe his position to parliament, said Mercer, the Governor-General is entirely above party politics.

The next speaker, R. Hartman, upholding the affirmative side, based his speech on the fact that the Governor-General was first appointed to represent the British Empire in Canada to manifest the fact that young Canada was unable to govern herself, and that since this condition no longer exists, the office of Governor-General is no longer necessary.

MacIntyre Refutes Statements
MacIntyre, the second speaker on the negative side, spent most of his allotted fifteen minutes in refuting the points brought forward by his two opponents, and in supporting the statements already made by his colleague.

After the rebuttal, the reports of the judges were handed in, and the negative side was announced to be the victor. MacIntyre was chosen as the best speaker of the evening, and he is now eligible for the Lachlan Gibb Cup Competition which will be held at the end of the season, when all of the scheduled debates have been held.

Somerville Lecture

This year's Somerville lecture will be delivered by Dr. Arthur Willey, F.R.S., Emeritus Professor of Zoology. His subject will be, "Adaption in Nature and in Art." The lecture, which is to take place in Moys Hall at 8.30 on Friday, Nov. 23, will be free to the public without any tickets being required.

Biological Society Hears Address On Gastric Innervation

M. H. Friedman Outlined Nerve Supply to Stomach In Vertebrates

INCREASED FUNCTION

Parasympathetic Assumes Greater Motor Importance In Higher Vertebrates

Describing the innervation of the stomach in vertebrate animals to the meeting of the Biological Society last night, M. H. Friedman, research worker in the department of Experimental Medicine, indicated the increasing importance of the parasympathetic system both as a motor and secretory nerve in the higher members of the vertebrates. This meeting was held in the main lecture theatre of the Biological Building, and was followed by a general discussion.

Outlining the general development of the stomach from a simple gut tube, the speaker explained that in lower animals, such as the elasmobranch fishes the stomach functions also as an excretory organ. It is usual to find about two percent urea in the gastric juice of these fishes. Such a condition is found also in most invertebrates, and in humans under pathological conditions. The secretion of the gastric juice itself is indirectly controlled by the sympathetic nerves.

Double Innervation

In the teleost fishes an advance is noted in the presence of both sympathetic and parasympathetic innervation. This has been seen only by examination of the gross anatomy, since there is no experimental data on the results of stimulation of either set of nerves. One worker came close to this by studying the effect of parasympathetic drugs on the motility of the stomach, and his results indicate the production of a motor effect. No work has been done on the gastric secretion, though from histological evidence it is known that both the hydrochloric acid and the pepsin are secreted by the same cells. Experiments on the intestine, however, revealed that in the carp vagal stimulation results in relaxation of the duodenum.

As a common laboratory animal, the frog has been investigated rather intensively. Here, the sympathetic has been shown to be the motor, and stimulation produces strong contractions. Vagal stimulation, however, may or may not produce contraction. If the muscles are already in the contracted condition, relaxation is produced, but if they are relaxed, contraction results. Both of these actions are definitely motor responses. The secretion in the frog, as contrasted with the mammal, is under sympathetic control, and stimulation of the splanchnic nerve produces an appreciable secretion of non acid juice.

Mechanical Stimulation

In the frog, also there is a mechanical stimulation for the production of gastric juice. If the brain is pithed as far as the medulla, mechanical stimulation of the gastric mucosa results in a flow of juice. Destruction of the spinal cord abolishes this effect. The vagus appears to have something to do with the production of pepsin, ninety percent of which is produced in the oesophagus, though it has nothing to do with the acid production from the stomach.

In the birds the digestive tract includes a crop, a proventriculus, and a secreting stomach. The crop is innervated by both sets of the autonomic nervous system. The sympathetic and the vagi are both motor nerves and stimulation of these produces either contraction or relaxation, depending on the state of the muscles previously. This similarity of action of the two nerves is as yet unexplained. In the stomach itself motility is under sympathetic control. The gastric secretion of birds is very acid.

In the case of mammals the parasympathetic vagus nerves are responsible for both the motility and the secretion. The sympathetic is inhibitory. The action of the nerves in a graded fashion linked up with a decreasing irritability proceeding down the gut was outlined, and a comparative study of the two nervous systems was then made.

MACCABEAN STUDY GROUP

The next meeting of the Maccabean Study Group will take place this Friday night at 8:15 in the Union Grill Room. Mordecai Etzioni will speak on "Current Trends in Yiddish Literature." Refreshments and discussion will follow.

Classics Department Head Dr. Mackay's Successor

Appointment Announced Last Night — New Occupant of Post Served as Acting Dean — First Came to McGill Eleven Years Ago — Principal Solo Remaining Position to be Filled — Five Men in Line

DR. WILLIAM D. WOODHEAD, Chairman of the Department of Classics, has been appointed Dean of the Faculty of Arts and Science at McGill University in the place of the late Dean Ira A. Mackay, according to an announcement made last night.

Since the death of Dean Mackay this summer this office has been vacant. Professor Woodhead has been serving during this interval as Acting Dean of the Faculty, and his position has finally been confirmed by the Board of Governors. He is, in addition, the holder of the Hiram Mills Chair for Classics, which he has occupied since he came to the University eleven years ago.

Educated in England

The new Dean was educated at Christ's Hospital and University College, in England. His first Canadian appointment was at the University of Alberta, in 1912, where he taught for five years. Following this he was on the staff of the University of Toronto for another six years, finally coming to McGill in 1923.

This announcement leaves only the new principal to be selected, and it is expected that this appointment will be made in the near future. At present the choice has been narrowed down to five men, among whom is Dr. W. H. J. Hetherington, Principal and Vice-Chancellor of Liverpool University, who was recently in Montreal. The post has been unoccupied since Sir Arthur Currie died last year.

Student's Directory Prepared For Sale

New Record Set This Year For Early Distribution

The Students' Directory for the session 1934-35 is now ready for distribution to students of McGill University. This is the earliest date since its origin that this booklet has been issued, and was only made possible, it has been announced, through the earnest work of the Registrar's staff, who have done extra work in reading proofs and compiling all the necessary information.

The Directory sells for fifteen cents a copy and is now on sale at the offices of all the building superintendents on the campus. It contains the names of all students on the campus, and also their faculty, year, address and telephone number. In it are also listed the officers of the Students' Society and Women's Union of the various faculties; telephone numbers of fraternity and sorority houses and of important campus societies and buildings.

Club Changes Name

Becomes League Against War and Suppression of Civil Liberties

McGill's newly-formed League Against War and Fascism will change its name to the League Against War and the Suppression of Civil Liberties.

The first meeting of the Society under its new name will take place this Friday evening, when Dr. R. B. Y. Scott of the United Theological Society, will be the guest speaker. The place has not yet been decided upon but will probably be announced in tomorrow's Daily.

Rifle Club Gathers

Executive Announces Indoor Shooting Season

The first meeting of the McGill Rifle Club, which has arranged a season of indoor rifle shooting, will be held in the Grill Room of the Union at 5.15 this afternoon. The chief purpose of the meeting is to determine the number of students interested, and at what time they would prefer to shoot.

Lee-Enfield, 22 Rifles have been granted to the club by the Government and the use of a Rifle Range in the vicinity has been arranged. It is emphasized that as the expenses of the club are small the fees will be proportionately low.

Senior Hockeyists Meet Lafontaine Blues Tonight

Second Place in Senior Group At Stake in Tilt

Redmen to Meet League-leading Senators in Ottawa Saturday

WITH second place in the Senior Group at stake, Bob Bell's Redmen stack up against the Lafontaine Blues tonight in the first of a double bill at the Forum, confident of garnering their second league victory and four points; and stepping up within striking distance of the Ottawa Senators whom they meet in the Capital over the week-end.

The squad ran through a brisk work-out yesterday, when the boys brushed up on their passing attack. The shutout administered them by Les Canadiens last week is a thing of the past, and the Lafontaine net should be dented plenty tonight.

McLernon Signed

Bob McLernon was officially signed up by the Red team, and will be in the game for certain tonight. According to Coach Bell, Hollie McKnight will be in the nets, while Melkeljohn will start on the defence, while Ellis, Morse and Crosby will comprise the starting forward line. McKay, Hall and McLernon will alternate on the defence, while Duff, Crutchfield, Lamb and Dickinson will take their turn up forward.

Lafontaine expects to have two of her five mutineers back in harness tonight. Laframboise and Bernard are expected to wear the Blue livery against the Redmen. "None of the dissenting players will be permitted to play for another team."

Royals vs. Vics

In the second morsel of this double bill, Don Penniston's Royals step into Frank Carlin's Vics. The latter have yet to register a victory in the Senior Group, in spite of the fact that they have a much improved outfit. Kenny Farmer, former McGill star, who led the league in scoring last year, has failed to tally so far this season.

On Saturday, the Redmen journey to Ottawa to meet the Senators, who have proved themselves to be the league sensation. They are the team to beat this season. Should McGill take Lafontaine into camp, and then proceed to upset the dope by beating the mighty Senators, they will find themselves sitting on the top of the heap. That however involves quite a lot of ifs.

Julius Chollette, Senator forward, has been setting quite a scoring pace. In the three league games in which he has participated, he has scored no less than eight goals and one assist. Which is some going for any company.

Correspondence

To the Editor,
McGill Daily.
Dear Sir,—

It has recently become customary for the Daily to indulge in periodic outbursts against Student Apathy in the Editorials. When the inventive flow, or should it be, inventive flow, has dried up it has been found necessary to resort to quotations from issues of the Paper dating from the earlier years of the Century. It is not uncommon to find the contents of a serious Editorial of one week re-served to us the following week in a so-called humorous manner by some irreverent columnist; nor is this matter any exception. Despite the apparent sincerity of the Editors they seem to have no objection to having their subjects butchered to make a Roman holiday. But as far as I am aware no attempt has been made by any of the much maligned students to rebut the accusation, or to palliate their crime. It is time that someone tried to answer the mournful Jeremiahs of those "high grade blind," but doubtless, well meaning, prophets of woe.

If the Student's Handbook is consulted there will be found twenty Student's Activities—such as the Daily, the Players' Club, the Choral Society, etc.—and forty Undergraduate clubs. This does not include recently formed

Senior Hoopsters Tackle Grads In Exhibition Friday

First Game of Season For Van Wagner's Squad

RAPIDLY rounding into shape, Coach Van Wagner's senior basketballers are pointing to their first exhibition contest of the season this Friday against the newly formed McGill Grads. Led by their captain the veteran Don Small, the squad looks forward to a successful defence of their intercollegiate title. Among the seasoned aspirants for regular berths on the team are Gormley, Bowes, Huff and Brown. The latter played with the Queen's senior hoopsters last year.

The McGill Grads, who are entered in the M.B.L., boast a powerful squad, which boasts an array of top notch talent formerly on McGill championship outfits. Although no arrangements have been made as yet for a playing floor for the team, they will use the Sun Life Gym in the meantime.

Many former stars of Van Wagner's squads of former years will be seen in action. Johnny Schuler and Carvel Hammond, who were with the Nationale Dominion finalists, will be in uniform. Last year's senior team has supplied the Grads with Okey Ross and George Faulkner, while the 1932-33 squad is represented by Mel Rice, Bob Calhoun, and Dr. Gerry Halpenny. It is expected that Charlie Drew and McLean will turn out as well.

Bob Calhoun has been appointed president of the Club, while Carvel Hammond is vice-president. The secretary-treasurer is Frank Park, who will be manager as well.

On December 8th the Senior squad will travel down to Verdun to meet McGill in an exhibition encounter. The intercollegiate schedule is as follows: January 25—Queens at Varsity; January 26—Queens at Western; February 1—Western at Queen's; February 2—Western at McGill; February 9—Varsity at Western; February 9—Queen's at McGill; February 16—McGill at Western; February 22—Varsity at McGill; February 23—Varsity at Queen's; March 1—Western at Varsity; March 1—McGill at Queen's.

Seniors Meet Today In Union Grill Room

Discuss Plans For Coming Year at Luncheon

The graduating class in Arts and Science will hold its first gathering of the year today at one o'clock in the Grill Room of the Union, in the form of a luncheon. This get-together is for the purpose of discussing plans for the coming year, which the executive hopes to make an active one. Any suggestions or "bright ideas" will be welcomed.

A charge of forty cents for the luncheon will be made. Louis Johnson, President of Arts '35, will be in the chair.

societies such as the Philatelist's Club, the League against War, etc. These must receive a certain amount of support or they could not exist, much less be even formed. But apart from all that, the University student—if he be worthy of the name—has little time for outside activities, which, in the light of the more serious work of studying for a degree, can only be called amusements. Most people I imagine—and who can blame them—prefer to derive their amusement in some other fashion than attending meetings on this and that, merely because they feel that not to do so would lay them open to the charge of being apathetic. Students are a busy set of people with little time for extraneous matters.

You may scoff at my opinion if you like, but you cannot disregard that of Ruskin, who wrote to the students of Glasgow University:

"What in the devil's name have YOU to do with either Mr. D'Israeli or Mr. Gladstone? You are students at the University and have no more business

QUEEN'S, MUSTANGS MAY ENTER SENIOR COLLEGE HOCKEY

League Meeting in Kingston on Saturday to Decide Matter

Representatives from McGill, Varsity, Queens and Western meet this Saturday in Kingston to discuss the possibilities of expanding the senior intercollegiate league to a four team circuit. Western's team, it is felt, is of senior calibre, and it is hoped that they will be included. The difficulties of Queen's re-entry to the league are tied up with the fact that in the event of their returning to the intercollegiate fold, they would be ineligible for competition in the Intermediate O.H.A., while participation in the Senior O.H.A. would necessitate too arduous a travelling schedule.

Dr. R.B. "Bobby" Bell, popular mentor of the McGill ice squad, when interviewed last night stated that he personally would like to see a four team college league materialize. When asked whether McGill would challenge for the Allan Cup through the intercollegiate loop, if such were successfully revived, Dr. Bell said that the Redmen would challenge for the cup through that channel, if they decided to enter the Allan Cup play-downs at all.

The dates for the McGill-Varsity tilt have been announced. The Redmen journey to Toronto on Feb. 22, and meet the Blueboys here on Feb. 15th.

Water Polo

The postponed water polo game with M.A.A.A. will not be played tonight. Instead there will be a practice at 5 o'clock at the K. of C. tank.

The C.A.H.A. Gets Tough

THE country's amateur hockey pot is boiling merrily today with the deep purple of commercialism threatening to flavour the whole stew under impetus of the strong yeast of a blanket denial to pass around transfers like election cigars. All of which mixed metaphorism means that the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association has voiced its long-felt but suppressed disgust at the flagrant violations of the spirit of amateurism in Canadian hockey today, and has put down the official foot on the heretofore prevalent system of handing out wholesale transfers to those picturesque rink performers who travel around the country year after year in response to hurry-up service calls from so-called amateur clubs. In answer to this edict of the controlling body, the British Columbia amateur hockey moguls fired a secession salvo, and voted a 'straight commercial ticket, thereby breaking with the parent organization and relinquishing the right of the teams under its jurisdiction to compete for the Allan Cup, symbol of Canadian amateur hockey supremacy. Today reports from the Maritimes filter through to the effect that the Atlantic seaboard simon-purees are contemplating a parallel action, which, if effected, will create a pretty mess indeed, since the Moncton Hawks have at present in their possession that same Allan Cup. It looks very much like curtains for the C.A.H.A. as the poison of dissatisfaction seems to be draining into the country from both coasts. The commercial idea in hockey has tended to become more and more prevalent throughout the country generally from year to year in recent times, although Quebec seems to have rejected at least the more flagrant kind, as evidenced by the folding up of the Bell Telephone, Royal Bank, and other squads of that type several years ago. On the other hand, Ontario fans have taken to the commercial variety like a duck to stuffing, with the result that Senior O.H.A. attendance records have recently been nothing to write home about. The prairie provinces, it appears, have so far resisted the commercial influence. It would be difficult to say just how the secession of the two coastal branches of the C.A.H.A. would effect the general stability of that organization, but the fact remains that such an occurrence will undoubtedly have repercussions later, if not immediately, and not only in hockey circles, but in amateur rugby as well.

Cha Gheil! Cha Gheil! Cha Gheil!

THIS corner would like to add its little token of respect to the flood of printed praise which has greeted the successful efforts of Ted Reeves' Queen's gliders in annexing the intercollegiate rugby championship this year. The football kings of Kingston managed to eke out an 8-7 win over Varsity in Toronto last Saturday, in the college play-off. The Toronto squad had a week before finished in first place, beating McGill in Montreal to complete the season in the lead position, while the Gaels were taking it easy in London, allowing the Mustangs to enjoy their only victory of the season, which meant very little to Reeves' men since they were certain of qualifying for the play-off tilt with Varsity. The contending teams met, as we have said, and the Tricolour won out in what was reported as a thrilling gridiron duel between opposing kicking stars, Johnny Munro of the winners, and Bob Isbister, the Blue ace. But what makes the victory of the Queen's forces truly remarkable is their refusal to lay down from a mid-season blow which saw five regulars suspended for illicit trafficking with fraternity membership. To finish the season with a handful of subs, and not only to finish but to win the championship, that was the achievement of the iron men of Kingston. And all this in the face of one-point victories and one point defeats! The strain of winning and losing by such margins must have been little short of terrific. But they did it, and today they're sitting on top of the collegiate pigskin world. Cha Gheil! Cha Gheil! Cha Gheil! whatever that may mean.

Do They Rank or Are They Rank?

THE intercollegiate all-star team has just been announced. Three local collegians were awarded top ranking by a group of representative coaches and reporters. The honoured McGill men are Don Young, Louis Rusch and Charles Letourneau. Young, who climaxed his college grid career this season, is not new to all-star ranking, but the other two Redmen are. Four Toronto men, three from Queen's, and two from Western complete the mythical squad. The detailed selection appeared in yesterday's Daily, but what did not appear is the name of Johnny Munro, for the very good reason that he was not selected. This gentleman, who did nothing much all season except keep Queen's in the intercollegiate race with his great kicking and running, and win the title for them almost single-handed last week, was awarded the magnificent total of 1 (one) point by the all-star selectors. Are you laughing?

Slapsie Maxie Gets Slapped

NEMESIS may not be in Maxie Rosenbloom's vocabulary, but nevertheless that's what hit him last Friday night, and as a result the former Light-Heavyweight Champion of the World and Pride of the Chorus Girls' Union is now only Pride of the Chorus Girls' Union, and probably not even that now. Slapsie Maxie, who has taken part in some of the world's worst ring exhibitions, came out of a former chronic terpsichorean trance when he saw Bob Olin, an erstwhile sparring partner and stable mate, facing him across the ring. They fought a rousing battle for 15 rounds, according to the United Press, 10 of which were won by the rejuvenated Rosenbloom, 4 by the pretender to the throne, with one round even. Accordingly, the champion was rewarded for his pains by being separated from his title. The judges are probably the same people who pick intercollegiate all-star football teams.

Cinema de Paris

Presenting a subtle comedy as their main attraction, the Cinema de Paris has this week brought to their patrons a picture from the Paramount Studios in France, a picture which proves amply that American invasion of the French film field has reached a high peak of perfection. L'Ecole des Contribuables is an amusing satire on French taxation and illustrates one method of lightening to some extent that particularly onerous burden, the income-tax. A school is opened by the clever Armand Bernard, who plays the role of an ingenious young fellow who uses his head and makes a fortune—not so much literally as actually—this school guaranteeing to the public a means of overcoming, to all practical purposes, the income-tax, for a small fee. How this is carried through is left to our imagination! At least, the idea is sound.

M. Pauley runs away with the show. As the perpetually embarrassed father-in-law (a government employee), he makes faces, waves his hands and gyrates in general in a very amusing manner. The school is directed by his son-in-law, Bernard, and midway between the two is the beautiful Mireille Perry, who as the wife of the son, attempts reconciliation between the warring factors while finding time to carry on a few flirtations on the side. The situation becomes rather involved, but terminates in the usual happy ending, with the articulate Pauley, or as he is in the picture, Giroux, becoming a servant of the public, an appointment given him by the Minister of Finance. All in all, a jolly comedy, witty and well-filmed. The reality of the picture is one of its strong points.

The program is made complete with a Betty-Boop comedy, another farce, and a news-reel. Perhaps a little too much comedy, but who minds an extra laugh?

SEEN AND HEARD

By Cam (Puss) Swinchell

Rarest Crack We've Heard So Far Limited: "I feel like the floor of a birdcage." (This one was dropped in the Daily Office one day).

This one comes via the grapevine. History One classes for example. What two young men signed to get supper at a certain girls' Fraternity? (And what by the way is a girls' frat? ? ?) And, our correspondent queries, did they get it?

McGill Technique: It seems that recently a couple of our more experienced oods decided to enliven life a little. So they nailed a couple of eligible males and proceeded to manoeuvre same into Aux Delices on St. Catherine. The gathering seated itself and commenced on a few viands preceding same with sherry (no less) we are informed. The coeds began to lick their chops at the looks of the bill the lads would have to foot and to plan means of escape, when suddenly the boy friends expressed a desire to powder their noses or words to that effect. They advanced a few yards then pulled a snappy reverse, extension play and charged out to the street, leaving the chisellers to be chiselled. How many dishes were washed we don't know.

I Wonder What Became Of: The new edition of the Frohisher Frolics in the original and saccharine Street it that bad?

Now that there are no more rugby games (gridiron variety) there will be no more doleful sports editors trying to remember what the game was all about with the aid of black coffee. It seems to be a tradition—that after-game-sports-reporter's hangover by the looks of the Daily each Sunday night. But feminine inspiration behind a closed door seems to help.

According to an annoyed representative, the good old battle between the members of the Players' Club and the executive as to that locked door is still waxing long and loud. Do the executive need all that time—or can't they take the women to the Pit?

Furthermore what was the game that was being played in aforesaid Club on Friday afternoon? Was it a variation of Rugby? Judging by the blissful expression on the young lady's face, it was extremely enjoyable at all events.

The Editor,

McGill Daily.

Dear Sir,—

The headlines which appeared in yesterday's Daily were indicative of the student body's opinions regarding war and their part in it. I should like to point out that this consensus of opinion, "Justify War—Then Only Will We Fight," means absolutely nothing.

First, just exactly what is a justifiable war? The answer is obviously "a defensive war to protect our homeland." Very well. Let us assume that Canada has been attacked by some foreign power, and that all good Canadians promptly spring to her defense. What happens? Some are killed, some wounded, and the rest frightened almost to death. If this defensive war has been successful, then what? The status quo remains the same, save for a financial panic or two, and a few new graves. But, of course, we have preserved our homeland, and that is really all that matters.

And if the defense has been unsuccessful? Then we have a new and probably better government, a few destroyed cities, and little else, with the possible exception of a new sandwich or two named in honor of the defeated general. The cry now goes up, "Are we to bow down to a new and foreign government?" The answer is Yes; nothing could be worse than the methods of government now in force, and, since the underlying principles of government are the same the world over, there is little need to fear that some trick system will be foisted upon us.

And if we do not fight this invading power? Then we have a new government, a couple of executions, and a whole flock of new uniforms for the new Army. Maybe even a Navy; who knows?

And soooo, it all comes to the same thing, except that defeat or refusal to fight may result in a better deal all around.

Thanking you for your valuable space,

I am,
Semper Ridens.

The Editor,

McGill Daily.

Dear Sir,—

Alas! What a pity! Thus does time weaken man's resistance. What a mighty force this is! No! I shall not discuss the long-departed Schultz, but the once great McParfootin.

With much enthusiasm did I read the one and only McParfootin's great treatise on playing tag. Heartily did I endorse his viewpoint and as heartily was I tired of being IT. At last, I ruminated, do I see the staunch and stalwart defence of man's rights against the wiles of women—McParfootin was my ideal. At once was he raised upon a pedestal, put among other great seekers of liberty, Montesquieu, Voltaire, Rousseau, Washington, Lincoln, amongst these did I venerate the great McParfootin, and I dreamt of the days when I would tell my descendants of having been at the same college as he.

But alas! "So are the mighty fallen." McParfootin has failed us. No longer can he refer to this article and exclaim, "Look upon my works, oh mighty, and despair." Ah, but you say these are drastic words. Nay, judge for yourself.

Upon the sixteenth day of the eleventh month in the year of our Lord one thousand, nine hundred and thirty-four, did McParfootin condescend to accept my offer to give him a lift home with Annabelle. Highly elated, I walked in his company toward Milton Street after having seen him refuse to buy a tag offered him by a coed on the Arts steps. In fear of provoking his displeasure I also refused. However—(Oh, the mortification of it all!) at the gate leading to Milton Street, It Happened!

A fair coed, seeing the great McParfootin in our company, smiled one of the prettiest smiles it ever was my joy to behold, and approached us with a tag—i.e., a red feather. Once more I expected McParfootin to staunchly say, Nay!—But he faltered, and dug deep down into his trousers and emerged with a nickel, for which he was presented with a tag.

However, after, when the spell was over, the humiliation of it all struck him and he generously handed me the tag. "Yes! So are the mighty fallen—women and time must take their toll." (E. J.) B. K.

Editor's Note:—The following is article which gave B. K. his wrong impression of McParfootin:
Let's Play Tag

The bank-robber, who makes no bones about his meretricious mission, is gradually beginning to win our respect after we have dodged through the past few weeks under a barrage of tagging epidemic. At once the old slogan "Faith, Hope and Charity" comes to our mind, with the sinister implication that if you have Faith, you can Hope to escape Charity.

We haven't any quarrel with the city and admirable ideals of any tag-day, but we certainly object to the battering tactics of the pretty young lassies and junior leaguers, et al. They mount guard at every available entrance and exit of our Institution of Learning. They smile and gush, ogle and cajole, and appear to reach the pinnacle of ecstasy only after they have forcibly extracted your last nickel or dime, and adorned you with the badge of honor, to wit: a martlet or possibly a pipe-cleaner twisted into the shape of a petunia.

Making a practice of tagger-dodging, (for this genus pesillential, like the auto, makes the life of the pedestrian miserable), we encountered this ducky little vignette. We were walking past the Library all unsuspecting, when practically out of nowhere a young damsel appeared, and grinning from ear to ear, extended a box of tags, with the inevitable slot machine, and exclaimed: "Look! I'm beaming all over!" She was still beaming after we beat a hasty retreat. For she had expelled another sucker. Wanna play tag? Now! I'm always IT!

Claude Dubuc.

Life of Victor de Laprade, the man and his poetical work," which was the subject of his thesis for a Doctorate in Letters, and an important contribution to history of literature. It is remarkable how painstaking modern historians and bibliographers are in their undertakings. The amount of reading involved is simply amazing and as the conclusion of the authors are subject to close criticism and acute questioning by masters at the public presentation of a thesis, the future Doctor cannot leave anything to chance and must be sure of his facts.

Varsity Spirit in France

THAT book reminds me of the extraordinary evolution undergone by century-old universities in the Old Country. France may have had several revolutions but practically none in the educational and scholastic fields. It has strangely enough followed the Anglo-Saxon trait of modifying existing institutions by a slow but constant progress. Oxford today is certainly not the same as it was two centuries ago, and yet it has not abandoned its ancient traditions nor many of its original principles. La Sorbonne has had a similar gradual evolution. Some of its guiding principles, some of its methods are ancient in terms and by the letter, but its soul is modern or nearly so. Its graduates, no more than those from Oxford are not yet turned out as finished products such as impatient business men would like them to be. They have culture, they have been trained to study and to grasp the "ensemble" of phenomena, they are ready to tackle practical problems of the day and they will master them quicker than non-graduates, but they are not yet thorough business men, they are not materialistic, but cultural rather. It is hard to express such an intangible thing as this since it involves more questions than this column allows, but I prefer the Old Country system to that prevailing in some Universities from the South.

Revue Bleu et Or

THIS famous revue, presented annually by the Students from the University of Montreal is to take place on the evenings of Thursday and Friday of this week (Nov. 22nd and 23rd) at the Imperial Theatre. We are informed this spectacle will excel previous offerings and a large number of
